Feedback on screencasts from Mandatory Assignment 1

On the slides for today's lesson are the feedback groups for Mandatory Assignment 1. Find the group you are in – you have to give feedback to all the other students in your group. There are links to all the videos on Fronter.

The purpose of feedback
You get the opportunity to refresh a subject and look at the subject from the angle of another student. Look at it as an opportunity for repetition. If you have the opportunity, it would be a good idea to watch all the videos.

The feedback you give should focus on:

- Appropriate use of the terms of the subject

- Presentation of the concept

- How easy it is to understand the code example(s)

The feedback process
Your feedback should be given both in written and oral form. The written part should be no longer than ½ A4 page, but still comprehensive enough to make sense for the receiver.

At the lecture at October 7th you will work in your feedback groups. Start by watching one of the videos. Then each of you give your oral feedback. When the oral feedback is given, it is possible to ask questions about the feedback and get an elaboration on the comments. The group then discusses and writes minimum a few lines, maximum ½ page feedback. You then e-mail the feedback to both me and the person receiving feedback (or you collect all your feedback in one document and e-mail that in the end). Then you can move on to the next video.

It is of course okay to give negative feedback, but be aware that this is the first time making a screencast of any kind, and therefore it is plenty of room for improvement. Please try to focus on how the presentation can be improved and remember to give positive feedback on the parts that deserves it.
